And, having taken a position and being convinced that it is tenable, hold to it until it is demonstrated fallible. People with opinions are always respected. Whether we agree with them or not, it is the physician who writes who makes his reputation, and it is reputation which brings success. I do not mean those who compile from others work, but I mean those who, in the love of their fellow-men, set down what they have found to be practicable and good for others to know, who have crystallized their thoughts into writing. --New York Medical Journal. The Danger Of The Communion Cup. --We are pleased to know that the frequent discussion in these columns as to the danger of the communion cup in propagating disease is bearing fruit by the transference to the columns of the daily press. The public is thus being educated to the necessities of the situation, and there is a reasonable hope that the claims of preventative medicine will be vindicated even against those who through faith in old forms have failed to listen to reason before. The following telling experience, detailed by Dr. Albert S. Ashmead in a recent letter to the Sun, points its own moral: The last time I knelt at the communion altar of the Episcopal church there knelt at one side of me a patient...
